For those of you interested in the discussion I've had with the State Attorney's Office, the emails are attached for review. She is up to date on all of the transactions from 2008 to date and she recommends that I pursue the next legal steps which is what intend to do.

YES! Absolutely. The State Attorney's Office doesn't have arrest powers. The police investigate and then make an arrest if they have probable cause to believe a crime occurred. They then present it to our office and we decide what if any charges to file. Once charges are filed, we prosecute the case.

So, should I report the possible financial crimes to the police department to start the investigation?
